Subject: MS settlement

Justices,

Why on earth do you want to add to Microsoft's monopoly by allowing them to seed their inferior software in schools, which is not even traditionally an MS market? Macs are much easier to use, and Apple has held that market for years. You're doing nothing but furthering their marketshare by letting them "give" their software to schools, thus locking up a new market for years to come.

This is not at all an equitable settlement. It does nothing to Microsoft financially, except open up a new market for them.

Do you want to punish MS for their monopolistic practices, or help them to achieve their own goals?

Sincerely,
Joanne Kalogeras
